Video games get a lot of scrutiny, but parents should also keep in mind other places where their children may be exposed to violence such as movies, TV and the internet. At the end of the day, parents have to make a call when it comes to their kids and violent video games, said Umang Jain, co-founder of tech gaming company ed SplashLearn.We reviewed a list of NPD, as well as a list of all-time best-selling games from IGN, a popular video game site, to determine the best video games on the market right now.
